How can I view web pages without a browser? Any ideas on how I can view a web page without downloading a web browser? I'm trying to do web research for a professional experience, and without access to all the programs I need to view web pages, I have some major problems. Here's an example (yes, my bias is painfully obvious) mysql> select comment, comment date from test; +-----+ l comment | comment | date | +-----+ 2014 4:08:59 PM | | | January 2, 2014 4:38:23 PM | | | January 2, 2014 7:38:10 PM | +----+ 3 rows in set (0.00 sec) So I can get a sample of comments for a video for example, but I've got to load up the website (website as in actual website that is obviously viewable if I can find a program that can access it) Is there a way to view web pages like I would a news article (put it on a screen) and get a direct link to that page? I've looked in the spotlight on Windows but couldn't find anything. Any ideas? A: There are a number of programs that can do this. I like using Google Chrome. You can just go to google.com and in the address bar, type'site:www.example.com' This will then take you straight to the webpage. A more basic way would be to just download the HTML of the webpage and open it up in notepad++ (or whatever your favorite editor is). There are many editors that will do this for you. Q: Deleting S3 object with almost zero bytes in the name I have 2 S3 objects in the same bucket whose names are the same but with just 2, 4 bytes difference. They are named "one" and "two", respectively. Question: If I delete one, will "two" also get deleted? A: The AWS API requires that you use unique names when you are naming objects in S3, and you can use S3's prefixes to indicate uniqueness. See the docs for more
